

PRESS RELEASE

Rotterdam, 15 March 2006

From WOrd Of PHotographY, www.woophy.com

Dutch-based photography website receives European Seal of Excellence

Summary

- Woophy's one year anniversary: plenty of reasons for celebration
- Winning the European Seal of Excellence
- A feature article in the Wall Street Journal
- Monthly 'Daily Life on Earth' competitions accessible to anyone

Woophy or WOrd Of PHotographY is a website founded by a Dutch collective of photo aficionados and internet designers. This coming April the international photography database celebrates its one year anniversary.

Several milestones have been achieved in Woophy's first year online:

- More than 6,800 members uploaded over 70,000 photos of over 10,000 cities and villages world-wide.
- The European Multimedia Associations Convention (EMMAC) awarded Woophy the European Seal of Excellence in Multimedia. The award distinguishes ICT & digital media companies with an excellent track record in innovation.
- A March 7 article in the Wall Street Journal praised the human element Woophy adds to the world of Internet maps: "Instead of orbiting satellites, the site employs a volunteer army of amateur shutterbugs and travel enthusiasts to document the far corners of the world."

About Woophy

Woophy is a photographic, accessible, visual, current, democratic and collective online map picturing our beautiful world. Photography buffs from all over the planet can upload their pictures into a personal account protected by a personal password, for free.

Each month, Woophy invites photography fans from all over the world to submit their most beautiful digital photograph to its monthly Daily Life on Earth Competition. Anyone who can upload a picture to the internet can take part and possibly win a prize. More information on the competition can be found on www.woophy.com.
